++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rather cloudy and damp to start. Brighter but showery later.

Today:
Rather cloudy and damp to start, perhaps wet in the far east. Some cloud breaks are likely to develop later, with some sunny intervals for many, but a few showers should also develop inland. Light winds. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
Remaining showers slowly dying out to leave a dry second half of the night, with developing clear spells perhaps allowing a few fog patches to form inland. Minimum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Monday:
On the cloudy side to start, but tending to brighten up, with decent warm sunny spells developing more widely into the afternoon. Perhaps becoming cloudier in coastal districts later. Maximum temperature 23 deg C (73 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Mainly fine through this period, with an onshore breeze probably giving some cloudy mornings, although sunny spells should eventually break through. Generally cloudier with a little rain possible on Thursday.
